

Narrative Pedagogy Research and Scholarship 2nd International Conference

June 29 - 30, 2008
Indiana University, Memorial Union
Bloomington, IN

Listening and Responding: Converging Conversations of Education, Practice and Research

Narrative Pedagogy is a phenomenological pedagogy, first described in nursing by Diekelmann in 1991. Since that time it has spread world-wide and is proliferating in nursing, midwifery and other disciplines. Narrative Pedagogy is a research-based pedagogy, grounded in interpretive phenomenology and narrative discourse. It both challenges and accompanies outcomes and competency based approaches to education and creates opportunities for faculty and students to learn together to improve their schools and the care they provide to others. Come join us for the second international conference on Narrative Pedagogy where teachers and scholars from around the world will gather to explore how Narrative Pedagogy and other interpretive approaches can be enacted and evaluated in different disciplines and settings.
